

ADVERTISEMENT

Subscribe/Manage Account Place An Ad LAT Store Jobs Cars Real Estate Rentals More Classifieds Custom Publishing

Los Angeles Times

LOCAL U.S. WORLD BUSINESS SPORTS ENTERTAINMENT HEALTH LIVING TRAVEL OPINION

MONEY & CO. TECHNOLOGY PERSONAL FINANCE SMALL BUSINESS COMPANY TOWN JOBS REAL ESTATE CARS

YOU ARE HERE: LAT Home → Collections → Aged

ADS BY GOOGLE

WORLD ECONOMY

China's elderly will overwhelm the nation

The one-child rule imposed 30 years ago has created too few young people to support the quickly expanding aging population.

July 06, 2009 | David Pierson

SHANGHAI — For three decades China's one-child policy helped power this nation's economic rise. With fewer mouths to feed, families saved. Poverty fell. Living standards improved.

But a social experiment that worked well in some respects is now threatening the country's hard-won gains. China's working-age population -- the engine behind its prolific growth -- will start shrinking within a few years.

ADVERTISEMENT

$1 = 8 MEALS

DONATE NOW

FEEDING AMERICA

Ad Council

ADS BY GOOGLE

香港貿發局拓展國際新商機
 提供國際市場的最新貿易資訊 專題報導及市場動態。
hktdc.com/International\_Market

你有TOEIC多益700分實力嗎?
 有英文實力才有職場競爭生存力,現在到 TutorABC填表,TOEIC多益測驗免費檢測!
www.tutorabc.com

FROM THE ARCHIVES

- Saving Social Security
February 14, 2011
- French indignant over government plan to raise retirement...
May 1, 2010
- Chinese Pioneers Being Asked to Relocate -- Once More
October 2, 2005
- Loving Others' Rejects

Meanwhile, the ranks of elderly are projected to soar. By the middle of this century, fully a third of China's population will be age 60 or older, compared with 26% in the United States. China's projected 438 million senior citizens will outnumber the entire U.S. population.

With fewer workers to support an aging society in need of care, China faces the same demographic squeeze confronting Western nations. The difference: China's family-tinkering policy has accelerated a shift that the country is ill-prepared to manage and finance.

"The problem is the age wave is coming while China is still relatively poor," said Richard Jackson of the Washington-based Center for Strategic and International Studies. "China may be the first major country to grow old before it grows rich."

The challenge is profound.

July 27, 2005

---

MORE STORIES ABOUT

---

Aged

Demographics

China

Population

Advances in family planning, nutrition and healthcare have resulted in longer life spans and fewer babies across much of the globe. The populations of developing regions such as Latin America and Asia are still much younger than those of U.S. and European societies. But they're aging much more quickly, lacking the time and resources to stitch together old-age social safety nets on par with those of rich, industrialized nations.

Shanghai provides a window into China's demographic future. Already China's largest city, it's also its grayest. More than one-fifth of its population is at least 60 years old. That percentage is projected to nearly double to 40% by 2030.

Seniors crowd public parks to do tai chi exercises in the morning and play checkers in the afternoon. They natter with one another on city buses, where everyone 70 and older rides free of charge.

So many residents have reached retirement age that city officials are urging local companies to persuade their aging staffs to stay on the job longer. The government has injected $618 million into the public pension system over the last two years to keep it solvent.

Lu Yiwen, a 45-year-old factory technician in Shanghai, is years away from retirement. But she's already anxious about her dotage.

"I'm not sure what we're going to do when my husband and I get old," she said. "We have one son and we just hope he can take care of us. Maybe he'll have his own business. But it's a lot of pressure for one child."

Despite its dazzling economic growth, China is still a low-income country. Its per-capita GDP in 2008 was just over $5,000, one-ninth that of the United States. Only about a third of China's workforce is covered by a pension system; most of those covered are urbanites. Families save copiously, but it's rarely enough to support them through old age. Average life expectancy is 73 years -- up a stunning 32 years since the People's Republic was founded in 1949.

ADS BY GOOGLE

---

UWC of South East Asia

Boarding for G7-G12 (12-18yrs) (I)GCSE and IB Diploma in Singapore

www.uwcsea.edu.sg

Original Green coffee 800

Slimmer Management Coffee Offers for retail and wholesale

www.green-coffee-800.com

---

For most Chinese, social security still means relying on extended family. But that bond is being strained by low birthrates and the migration of tens of millions of young people from the country to jobs in far-off manufacturing plants.

When the retirement center at 2 Ruijin Road opened 15 years ago, the thought of packing loved ones off to an old-age facility was still taboo.

"If you sent your parents to a home, people would accuse you of treating them badly," said Li Hong Mei, the center's chief physician. "Parents would just refuse to go."

Today, Li regularly turns the elderly away. The 60-bed center is often filled to capacity.

To ward off social catastrophe, China's central government has pledged to introduce a national pension system. The challenge will be crafting a plan that's generous enough to keep seniors from poverty but doesn't unduly burden the young. Today in China there are 5.4 working-age adults for every elderly person, according to the Center for Strategic and International Studies. That ratio will plummet to 2.5 by 2030 and to 1.6 by 2050.

"Other than lifting the one-child family policy or allowing immigration, there's not much they can do about demographic realities," said Susan Shirk, a professor at UC San Diego and author of "China: Fragile Superpower."

Introduced in 1979 by China's paramount leader Deng Xiaoping, China's one-child policy aimed to slow the nation's population growth and boost living standards. The rules apply mainly to married, urban couples, with exemptions for ethnic minorities and rural residents. The policy is estimated to have prevented between 300 million and 400 million births to date.

ADS BY GOOGLE

吉祥耳鼻喉科診所-台中首選

最專業的耳鼻喉科醫療團隊 全套德國設備 為您徹底解決病患 歡迎諮詢

www.geneclinic.com.tw

長時間使用眼睛 累了

眼睛疲勞不舒服? 滴新一點靈眼藥水 幫助眼睛促進新陳代謝 消除疲勞感!

www.i-ten-rin.com

1 | 2 | Next

  Comments
0

 推荐
推荐 1

 Tweet 0

 Share New

 +1 0

FEATURED

Green coffee beans show potential for losing weight

Red meat: What makes it unhealthy?

A universe without purpose

MORE:

The FDA warns against using quinine for leg cramps

Mortgage rates drop, Freddie Mac says; 15-year fixed at record low